What does a support worker do?

The day-to-day job of a support worker is built around the needs of the person you are supporting. It is full of variety and can include helping them to carry out daily tasks such as:

- personal care (showering, grooming and dressing)
- medication administration
- meal preparation
- manual handling
- transport
- purchases
- record keeping and reporting.

It can also include supporting a person to stay connected with their friends, family and the community, learn new skills, or pursue their personal interests and hobbies.

Job benefits

- Generous above-award pay
- Penalty rates for weekend shifts
- A range of rostered shifts available (morning, afternoon, night)
- On-the-job training provided
- Opportunity to study a Certificate III in Individual Support while working in the Industry
- Rewarding work environment
- Salary packaging (Anglicare is a not-for-profit which means that you can reduce the amount of tax you pay so that you receive more income)

Anglicare requirements

All Anglicare employees must have the following or willing to get:

- Australian Residency status or valid Australian working rights
- Current provisional or full Australian Driver's Licence and an insured, reliable motor vehicle
- Current Tasmanian Working with Vulnerable People registration
- National Police Check (Working with Vulnerable Peoples)

How does the traineeship work?

If you are offered a traineeship you will be enrolled in the Certificate III Individual Support (Disability) course. You will be provided with guidance and support to complete the requirements of your qualification, including 120 hours of work placement.

The traineeship role is a permanent part-time position and you must be willing and available to work a variety of shifts over a 24-hour period if required.
