The environment we’re working in

Anglicare’s work is affected by significant external trends including:

Government policy environment

A significant proportion of our funding is moving to a consumer directed model. This means a greater emphasis on promoting our services and communicating directly with clients.

Technology

Technological innovation will assist us to be more efficient and effective in how we deliver services.

Social

Clients are increasingly eager to be involved in the design and delivery of services. Some of the terms used to describe this trend are ‘co-design’, ‘co-production’ and ‘participative healthcare’.

These external trends are driving competitive pressures, especially for services funded through the National Disability Insurance Scheme (NDIS). These services are for clients living with disability or living with mental illness. Already there are over 1000 providers registered to provide NDIS services in Tasmania.

We are also seeing new competitive forces in Aged Care, and in some of the services that remain grant funded.
Our response

Anglicare is in a solid position to navigate this changing external environment.

Our organisation-wide response will include:

» expanding our marketing and customer engagement processes;
» improving our IT systems including our Customer Relationships Management capability;
» capturing data to inform continuous improvement;
» further investing in the skills development of the Anglicare team; and » effectively engaging with the community and policy-makers on social justice issues that affect our clients.
